NAPOLEON AND MAXIMILIAN—HUMILIATING ROLE OF THE FRENCH GOVERNMENT.—The fate of the Emperor Maximilian is a subject of as much comment at Paris as the Royal and Imperial visits. Some of the papers discuss the topic with great bitterness, not indeed that they have any great partiality for Maximilian, but that they feel that were his life to be sacrificed, as it has been, such a climax to the Mexican expedition would be very discreditable to France. The Gazette de France, an anti liberal paper, of June 4th, says

The noise and excitement of the fetes offered to the King of the Belgians and the Czar cannot make us forget the sad position of Maximilian in Mexico. At the very moment when we are asking what has become of him, a homicidal ball has, perhaps, terminated the unhappy adventure in which this Austrian Prince has been engaged, for no hope can be based in the clemency or even justice of Juarez.

As for us, we cannot but regret that our expedition has not served to rid Mexico of this dangerous man, for his apparent victories against the French policy will become very injurious for our prestige and for the protection of our countrymen. It seems to us inexplicable that not one of our Generals has been able to force the retreat of Juarez. We can understand that the expedition, undertaken as it was, has not been successful; the French Government alone indulged in illusions respecting the unfortunate enterprise; but that we have not had the satisfaction of taking Juarez prisoner, and to drive this insolent adventurer from the scene of war and politics, is to us incomprehensible. His capture, apparently easy, would have been a consolation for the amour propre of France. Juarez entered Mexico triumphant; Juarez having had the Emperor Maximilian assassinated—for execution in such a case would be assassination; Juarez reigning, after having made prisoner the Prince of our choice, conducted by our very selves to the Mexican shore, is a mournful situation, the gravity and consequences of which it is impossible to dissimulate.

The Gazette then proceeds to rebuke the semi-official prints for the serenely philosophical indifference in which they view the abandonment of Mexico and the consequent fate of Maximilian. The Gazette continues:

The news of the taking of Queretaro and of the order for the execution of the Emperor Maximilian, makes us remember the role we have played in his adventure; the same as the presence of the Czar at Paris brings to memory our defeat in the bloody repression of Poland; and finally, as the presence of the King of Prussia causes us to recollect that we were unable to buy Luxemburg, and that Prussia has profitted of that incident to make known, by Europe united in conference, the creation of a German Empire at our doors. Poor Maximilian! poor Poles! poor Hanoverians! poor Danes! It is indeed difficult for France to rejoice while the remembrance of your misfortunes is so great in her mind. And France does not easily forget the unfortunates, whom she has been powerless to defend.

SURRATT'S TRIAL.—By his own confession and the admission of his counsel, Surratt was connected with the secret service of the rebellion in 1864-'65. He knew the rebel agents in Canada, and often held communication with them. Witnesses called for the defense have testified that he went to Canada from Richmond, bearing dispatches from the rebel Secretary of State. Surratt must therefore have been perfectly acquainted with the plottings of these conspirators, and if convicted, may be induced to divulge them. Congress has authorized a complete amnesty for any one who will reveal the whole mystery of the assassination plot. The New York Herald, in commenting on the trial, has these remarks on this point:

Surratt, acting as the medium of communication between the conspirators in Washington and the self exiled chiefs in Her Britannic Majesty's North American possessions, where the schemes for hotel burnings in New York and bank robberies in St. Albans were securely concocted, can probably tell when the plan of abducting Mr. Lincoln was changed into the dernier ressort of his assassination. Nobody, surely, knows better than Surratt when this change of programme took place. It is a curious, well known fact, that the abduction of Lincoln was projected and discussed in the Southern papers two or three years before his death. Such a plan was regarded at that time as fair game. It was not very vehemently discouraged, and there was little blame attached to the idea, even in the North. A reward was offered by a gentleman of Alabama—made notorious by the fact—for the capture of President Lincoln, and that gentleman has since received the pardon of President Johnson. It is fresh in the memory of every one that when the collapse of the rebellion was almost inevitable, Jake Thompson, Sanders, and the other refugees in Canada got hold of Greeley, through the instrumentality of Colorado Jewett, and set on foot the memorable negotiations with Mr. Lincoln in which Greeley and Jewett attempted to lead him into an absurd compromise with rebellion. It was immediately after these negotiations failed that the assassination appears to have been decided upon. It is presumed that Surratt can tell the whole story, and no doubt he can.

SEEING THE SUN AT MIDNIGHT.—Hon. J. H. Campbell, United States Minister to Norway, with a party of American gentlemen, went far enough North to see the sun at midnight. It was 69° north latitude, as they ascended to a cliff 1,000 feet high above the Arctic sea. The scene is thus graphically described:

It was late, but still sunlight. The Arctic Ocean stretched away in silent vastness; the sound of its waves scarcely reached our airy look-out; away in the North the huge old sun swung low along the horizon, like the slow beat of the pendulum in the tall clock in our grandfather's parlor corner. We all stood silent, looking at our watches. When both hands came together at twelve o'clock, midnight, the full round orb hung triumphantly over the wave—the bridge of gold running due north spanned the waters between us and him. There he shone in silent majesty, which knew no setting. We involuntarily took off our hats; no word was said. Combine, if you can, the most brilliant sunset and sunrise you ever saw, and its beauties will pale before the gorgeous coloring that lit up the ocean, heaven and mountain. In half an hour the sun had swung up perceptibly on its beat, the colors changed to those of morning, a fresh breeze rippled over the flood, one songster after another piped up in the grove behind us—we had slid into another day.

They have at Atlanta a hotel keeper named Thompson, who is considered rather sharp at a joke, but he sometimes meets his match, as the following story goes to prove:

A traveler called very late for his breakfast, and the meal was hurriedly prepared. Thompson, feeling that the food was not quite up to the mark, made all sorts of apologies around the eater, who worked away in silence, never raising his head beyond the affirmative influence of his fork, or by any act even acknowledged the presence of mine host. This sulky demeanor rather vexed the landlord, who, changing the range of his battery, stuck his thumbs in his arm-holes and said: "Now, mister, confound me if I hain't made all the apologies necessary, and more too, considering the breakfast and who gets it, and I tell you I have seen dirtier, worse looking, and devil of a sight smaller breakfast than this is, several times." The weary, hungry one laid down his tools, swallowed the bite in transitu, and modestly looking up at the fuming landlord, exclaimed: "Is what you say true?" "Yes, sir." "Well, then, I'll be blamed if you hain't out-traveled me!" said he.

The average production of cigars in San Francisco for the past year is three millions monthly. The factories and shops engaged in the business number 103, of which 38 are Chinese. The manufacture employs 750 persons. The cigars manufactured are of pure Cuba tobacco, and of Cuba and Connecticut leaf in various proportions. The Havana cigars there are pronounced equal to the imported article, the duty on which amounts almost to a prohibition.

Description of the First Avitor.

The first machine on the Avitor principle has been named the "Hermes," and is now standing in a large building constructed for the purpose, at the Shell Mound Park, one mile and a half from the Milbrae Station, San Mateo county, on the San Jose and San Francisco railroad, and about 19 miles from this city. On entering the shed we found a large and solid looking vessel, though made of the lightest fabrics, supported in much the same way as vessels designed for navigating the sea are while in the process of construction, and surrounded by a similar scaffolding. The shape of the Avitor is that of a hybrid, between a fish and a short billed, short necked, plump bird, stretched and in the act of flying. The outlines and general features are as unlike the sketches and carricatures that have been put out as a crab is unlike a quail. The total length from stem to stern is 76 feet, to which must be added 13 feet of tail, making 88 feet over all. The greatest diameter of body is 21 feet; the hight from which the keel would be if it was a ship is 21 feet. A transverse section taken a little forward of the central point between the stem and the stern, would show not circular but a heart shape, the crown depressed and the greatest width being at about one third of the distance below the highest part of the back of the gas holder. From the tip, stretching backward on each side, 43 feet, and attached to the body of the vessel at the shoulders or broad part alluded to, are thin membranes, or horizontal fins or wings, fixed and rigid, and made of the same material as the integument of the same body. These planes act very much as the wings of a bird when sailing through the air and will steady the machine when afloat and prevent its rising and falling with every revolution of the propelling screws. These extensors or wings are ten and one fourth feet wide at the terminating points, near the propellors, thus giving a total breadth of 42 feet to the machine at the center. There is a portion of these wings, on each side, about ten feet square, which is movable. These movable parts are hinged on the forward edge, and there is about eight feet fixed extension between them and the extremity wings. These movable planes can be depressed or elevated 22 degrees up or down, at the will of the engineer, and when the engine is flying will increase or decrease its altitude, as a bird, by the inflection of the wings, can skim the surface of the earth or mount to higher altitudes. The rudder is as nearly the shape of a fish's as it can well be, and is controlled by light, stout cords connected with a small steering wheel in the engine room. The tail does not move exactly as the rudder of a vessel, but partially revolves on a rod projecting from the internal framing. When the helm is midships the rudder is perpendicular, but when the steersman wishes to port or go to the left, he inclines the upper limb of the tail to that side, a motion which throws the lower limb as much to the starboard on the right side. According to the speed at which the machine is going this would divert her course, and in an element presenting so little friction as the atmosphere, and a body shaped to overcome resistance so easily as the Hermes, it would probably only require a dip of two or three degrees in her tail to make her describe a circle in very narrow limits.—Bulletin.

THE ALBANY TRAGEDY.—The New York Tribune, of June 17th, gives the following from its Albany correspondent in relation to the recent terrible tragedy in that city:

Fifteen years ago Dr. Cole married Miss Barto, of Trumansburg, New York, daughter of the late Judge Barto. It was a love match, and for twelve years their home was the scene of unalloyed happiness. Within two or three years, however, the husband had noticed that his wife at times was moody and unhappy. He could not account for it. He had sent his wife $15,000 during the war, and she now possesses $40,000 in her right, left to her by her father's will. He consulted her friends and his, but could arrive at no conclusion. He was compelled by his duties to reside at or near New York, and he determined to bring his wife to Brooklyn, where she might be near her sister, and there he engaged furnished rooms. Meanwhile he visited Syracuse and met Mr. Hiscock in the street. Mr. Hiscock asked him, "Why, General, when did you come? When shall you go away?" He thought the latter question a singular one, and then at once remembering that the same question had been asked him on several previous occasions, said nothing, but looked his questioner full in the face, and Mr. Hiscock turned away downcast, and without a word. Returning to Brooklyn, brooding over the matter, he wrote to a cousin of his wife's, with whom she resided, asking if there had ever been any rumor in Syracuse prejudicial to his wife. The reply came, "There is room for the gravest suspicion."

Almost frenzied, he hastened to Syracuse, and there, when he questioned her, his wife fell on her knees and confessed that a criminal intercourse had existed between herself and Mr. Hiscock for nearly three years. It made him almost crazy, to use his words. All Thursday he stayed in the house, lest he should meet Hiscock on the street and kill him. On the day of the murder, with his wife and Mr. and Mrs. Cuyler, he started for Brooklyn. They were necessarily compelled to stop at Albany, and while there he thought he should be happier if it were settled in some way and was off his mind. He sent for his brother-in-law, Mr. Barto, a member of the Constitutional Convention, and asked him to go with him to see Mr. Hiscock, pledging his word that he would not take his life, but would only "make him get down on his knees and beg like a dog for it." This Mr. Barto refused to do, and said that he had no advice to give in the matter. It should be stated here that Mr. Barto and Gen. Cole have not been friendly ever since the latter took a commission in the first of Gen Butler's colored cavalry regiments. Thus left to himself, the frenzied man started for Stanwix Hall, intending to go quietly in by the side entrance, inquire the number of Hiscock's room, and go up to it. But as he went in he saw the seducer of his wife before him, a frenzy seized him, and without a moment's thought he fired. Although the act was not premeditated, he thinks it was justifiable, and expresses no remorse for it. His wife is now in Albany, and administers to his wants, visiting him daily. He professes to consider her a guilty woman, but not as guilty as the man he shot.

IOWA REPUBLICAN STATE CONVENTION.—The Iowa Republican State Convention was

The Daily Oregonian.

FRIDAY MORNING, JULY 26, 1867.

Boston Outdone.

We have by mail an account of the late progress of the acting President and his retinue through New England. Of course we also have the speeches. For, without the speeches, the mere journeyings of the celebrated egotist and his little band of admirers would afford a tame and unamusing spectacle indeed. But always having the speeches, we always have on such occasions a most spirited and enlivening scene. The late oratorical performance at Boston is a gem which shines with a radiance almost as pure as some of the former emanations from the same mine of modesty and wisdom. Had not the fame of the orator preceded him and thus happily prepared the minds of the orators of the "Hub" for what was to follow, some of them would doubtless have died of sheer envy on hearing the speech. All Boston was of course silent on the great occasion, and Johnsonian oratory showed to the best possible advantage. "I stand before you," said the illustrious speaker, "as I have just remarked, as the Chief Magistrate of the nation; and in the manner in which I have been received will not, I think, detract from your reputation or character." Some have complained that the President wants dignity; how, let us inquire, can a Chief Magistrate be deficient in this important quality who talks in this manner? Nothing can be more apparent than that he never forgets the station to which he has risen; no more does he intend that other people shall forget it. Hence he does not omit to remind his audience that he is Chief Magistrate of the nation—just to show them that he is fully conscious of his merit and greatness. The same vein of modesty is discernable in the words in which he expresses the deliberate opinion that the people of Boston will not be disgraced by his coming among them. The peroration is especially excellent. Observe the judicious repetition, the charming variety of expression, by which he contrives to keep himself as long as possible before his audience: "Then, my countrymen, in conclusion, and bidding you good-bye here to-night, let me tender to you—and when I do so, I do it in the utmost sincerity—let me tender to you my sincere thanks for the demonstration which you have made and for the cordial feeling you have manifested in receiving me in your midst; and in retiring from you to-night, let me bid you good-bye and tender you my heartfelt thanks for the cordial and kind manner in which you have received me on this occasion." There is nothing in any of the President's previous efforts that can surpass this, and the Bostonians have reason to congratulate themselves on having heard with their own ears a piece of oratory that is absolutely inimitable. It has been their good fortune to hear an oration which neither Ames, Otis nor Adams, neither Webster, Choate nor Everett could have delivered. The stars of old Faneuil Hall may now pale their ineffectual fires.

Territorial Aggregation.

Judicious people cannot afford to receive without question every announcement which is paraded as "news" by the New York press; therefore few had credulity enough to believe the story that was circulated some days since to the effect that the United States was going to absorb Mexico at once, and that the "greasers" were ready and waiting for the swallowing to begin. People may believe in the "manifest destiny of our country," that "the boundless continent is ours," and all that sort of thing; but they cannot believe that the time is just yet fully ripe for the annexation of Mexico. Though doubtless if we had a Democratic Administration, Congress and all, and the annexation question were made an issue, that party could see nothing in the "mongrelized" condition of Mexico to make the union undesirable. But whether we are destined to possess Mexico and British America or not, it is a fact that there is a tendency among the nations in modern times toward territorial aggregation, and it would be singular and anomalous if this tendency were not manifested in America the same as in the other hemisphere. A glance at the map of Europe will show that the principal nations are steadily absorbing the smaller ones. The most notable of recent instances of this sort are seen in the cases of Prussia and Italy. During the last few centuries this tendency toward territorial aggregation has been witnessed in the union of the many kingdoms which once occupied the Spanish peninsula into two; in the joining of England, Scotland and Ireland; in the extension of the bounds of France to the British Channel and the Bay of Biscay; in the gravitation of Norway to Sweden; and in the astonishing territorial aggrandizement of Russia. Rapid as are the changes in the political divisions of the world, the changes going on among the people are still more rapid. No longer shut up in the land of their nativity, they may mingle with each other and with distant nations; and the facilities for travel and for every species of communication are rapidly rendering them homogeneous. Thus, agencies are at work which are making the steady aggregation of territory under a few Governments possible and even necessary. If the time ever arrives when our people can go freely to Mexico and circulate through that country without restriction, or fear of danger or other interruption, the way will soon be open for its annexation.

We have been favored by McCormick with a printed copy of a lecture on the "Social and Political Tendencies of Christianity" by the late Bishop Scott of this State. The lecture was written early in 1861, though it seems never to have been published till recently. It is full of thought, expressed in the forcible manner of which the author was known to have been master. In those passages where he contends for unlimited freedom of religious opinions, subject only to the great essentials of Christianity, a world of truth is condensed into a small space, and yet rendered clear enough to carry the fullest conviction to every liberal mind.

The Cincinnati Enquirer says of the Republican candidate for Governor of Ohio: "Gen. Hayes agrees to run on the Republican ticket for Governor. He made his hands red in the great massacre, and is thought to be available in consequence." Of course it cannot be said of his opponent that he ever caused harm to befal a rebel during the "great massacre," and hence his availability on the Copperhead ticket.

A MONUMENT AT WASHINGTON ROCK.—On the 4th of July the corner stone was laid at Washington Rock, New Jersey, of another Washington monument. The New York Evening Post says:

Washington Rock stands three miles west of Plainfield, on the Blue Ridge, and commands the view of an immense stretch of country, including New York city, the ocean and Highlands at Sandy Hook, Amboy Bay, and the valley between and to the south beyond New Brunswick, and as far as Princeton. On a clear day, spires of Trinity, St. Peter's and some up town churches can be seen from the Rock without the aid of a glass. The monument was to be placed at the brow of the Rock, and will be a conspicuous object for a distance of perhaps fifty miles from the front and from either hand. It will of course be easily seen by telescope from Trinity Church spire, or from ships at Sandy Hook.

It was from this rock that Washington watched the movements of the army and guarded himself from surprise by the enemy during a part of the campaigns in New Jersey. The house in which he lodged is still standing under the mountain. The monument is to be built under the auspices of an association of gentlemen of Plainfield and vicinity, who will receive subscriptions for the purpose. Ten thousand dollars are already pledged. The cost will be determined by the amount of money subscribed.

As Like as Life.

As truthful a photograph as was ever given of the latter day Democracy, appeared in the San Francisco Dramatic Chronicle of July 2d. We commend it to those Democrats who still cling to the "flesh pots of Egypt," as something too good for them to be lost. The following are a few extracts from the article, and will serve as a taste:

The influence of this class of incorrigible and passionate devotees of barbarism is, however, utterly insignificant. They are as impotent as they are hard in heart and seared in conscience. For those potent arguments, the knife, the revolver, the rope, they have now no more terrible substitutes than old womanish objurgations, malignant sneers and blasphemous ravings, which, however offensive to the care ne tastes of civilized men, are no longer formidable. There is, however, another class of "abolition haters," who are as much more dangerous in their influence than the frank and ferocious barbarians just alluded to, as they are meaner and more cowardly. These are mostly Northern men, professing to be "good Union men, but not abolitionists." They do not defend slavery as a divine institution, they do not even object to its abolition; but they are bitter against the emancipated race. They would do nothing for them because it is "expensive." They do their utmost to prejudice the popular mind against the blacks, by appeals to ignorance, selfishness and passion; they lose no opportunity of intensifying the hatred of the white laborer, wherever such a feeling exists against the African. They eagerly gather up and proclaim every report of the follies or the crimes perpetrated by negroes, and refuse to make any allowance for the circumstances under which they have been so suddenly rescued from the degrading and imbruiting influences of bondage. As the men who belong to this class are governed by the meanest and most despicable impulses, are hard of heart, narrow of intellect, and utterly selfish in their feelings, appeals to reason and generosity are wasted upon them. Not so, however, with the people at large, whose minds they are struggling to imbue with their own hateful prejudices; and the mischief of their teachings may in some degree be neutralized, by presenting a fair, dispassionate, and common-sense estimate of what it is reasonable to expect from the freedmen in their present condition.

The Splendid Crop Prospects.

Never before in the history of this country have the crops given such promise of plenty. The hay crop, one of the most valuable, is now beyond the reach of any ordinary calamity, and the yield will be unprecedented. Our city readers can hardly understand what an immense gain this is to the country. During the last season the farmers in many rural districts saw the bottom of their hay mows for the first time in a score of years, and $40 to $50 per ton were often paid in the heart of agricultural districts largely devoted to grass culture. The crops of 1866 were put down in the census at a little over $10,000,000; that of 1866, by the Agricultural Bureau, at 21,978,627 tons, valued at $317,561,737; but the yield of 1867 is likely to be over 30,000,000 tons, a gain whose importance can hardly be estimated.

The wheat crop of the United States for 1866 is given by the Bureau at 151,999,996 bushels, valued at $338,773,646. The yield this season is still subject to more contingencies than the hay crop; but the testimony from all sections is more universally cheering and favorable to the largest crops than ever before in our experience. The same is true of the corn crop. The yield of Indian corn for last year was given at 867,946,296 bushels, valued at $261,655,295. For this year the promise now exceeds twelve hundred million bushels. Other grains, and most of the fruits are equally promising.

The effect of such a supply upon the finances of the country will be almost counterbalanced by the grossest mismanagement of national affairs. We have seen a statement in print, intended to show that it made little difference to the country whether the yield of any specified crop was large or small, since the price was enhanced by scarcity, and as much was obtained for a small return as a large one. This sophistry is too transparent to need refutation. The relief to all classes of laborers and producers to be found in the overflowing abundance now promised never came at a time when it was more sorely needed. It should be accepted with devout gratitude, and a due acknowledgement of its divine origin. No heart should be untouched by the teeming bounty which breaks in so signally upon the general despondency.—N. Y. Times.

A HARD DRINKER.—The Augusta (Me.) Journal tells the story of Sumner S. Brick, who seems to have been a good deal of a "brick" in his time but has now come to the conclusion that he has drank his full share of liquors, and henceforth will drink no more. Last winter he made the following little speech to some of his old friends, who were astonished to see him drinking water:

"Well, the fact is that I have drank my full share, as you who all know me will say, as all my friends say, and as I fully believe. Drinking has been a hard thing for me. At one time, in California I had thirty thousand dollars in gold, and I thought I would return to my home in the good city of Augusta and enjoy myself. While in drink I spent ten thousand dollars in buying part of a steamboat, and then bet five thousand dollars on a race with her, and to be sure of success I assisted in tending the fires. We kept the lead until the last mile or two, when in crowding her speed the boiler burst, the boat was ruined and twelve men killed. I had drank my share."

Three of the listeners to this little speech have since become teetotallers, saying that if "Sam. Brick could stop drinking, they could."

President Johnson promises to enforce the new reconstruction act. There is no need of this pretended condescension, as that act can be and will be enforced without his assistance. No doubt he intends another falsehood. On this weakness of his the Albany, (N. Y.) Journal remarks:

When President Johnson, called to the Chief Magistracy by the death of Abraham Lincoln, solemnly declared: "The duties are mine, and I will perform them honestly, trusting in God," he lied. When he proclaimed, in his first speech as President, that Treason should be made odious and Traitors punished, he lied. So when he said upon the passage of the Military bill over his veto, that he should faithfully execute its provisions notwithstanding his own opinions, he lied. All the evidence drawn from his acts and general policy tend to show that he never intended to discharge his duties honestly, to make Treason odious, or to faithfully execute the provisions of the Military law.

IS SLAVERY ABOLISHED?—The New York Day Book, one of the leading organs of the Democracy, asks this question and makes some remarks which are so curious that we copy them:

We sometimes receive letters, asking us if we are in favor of restoring slavery, but a good deal more pertinent question would be, "is slavery abolished?" It is stated that Mr. Charles O'Conner has written a letter to a member of the Maryland Constitutional Convention, expressing the opinion "that slavery has never been lawfully abolished, and that the amendment to that effect has no place in the Constitution." As for the "amendment," so-called, it was never proposed in accordance with the Constitution, nor was it ratified except under the duress of military power, and hence is legally void. Southern society, therefore, has been torn asunder by force of arms, and will continue in that condition until this force comes to an end. How soon that will be, depends upon how rapidly the people are enlightened.

The London correspondent of the Chicago Journal, writes the following item about Charles Dickens:

You know, of course, that he has not, for a long time, lived with his wife. Not long ago he made purchase at a jeweler's of sundry articles amounting to £200 or £300, and directed them to be sent to "Mrs. Dickens." From some unexplained cause the messenger took them to the real Mrs. Dickens, instead of to the person intended by Mr. Dickens, under that appellation, and there has been quite a row about. Mrs. Dickens refuses to give the articles up, and Mr. Dickens refuses to pay for them, and the jeweller falls back on the letter of his instructions. They were, he says, ordered to be sent to Mrs. Dickens, and to Mrs Dickens they were delivered. If the great author dares to face a public exposure, there will be a pretty piece of work for the lawyers.

CURE FOR POISON OAK.—The San Francisco Times furnishes an antidote for poison oak in the following:

By a wise provision of Providence, the antidote to the virus of poison oak grows alongside of that violent plant. It is the yerba d'oro or bearberry. A decoction of the leaves of this applied to the part contaminated will invariably counteract the poisonous effects of the oak. The remedy has been long known to the natives of this country, and they seldom use anything else. A gentleman stationed at Fort Point, the sutler, Mr. Uhrlandt, has been in the habit of employing the remedy, and with unvarying success. He speaks so highly of its qualities that we publish his practice for the good of the public.

Marion County Teachers' Association.

The following is a copy of a printed "Circular" furnished us by the Secretary of this Association:

The third annual session of the Marion County Teachers' Association will be held at Belpasi, commencing on the second Tuesday in August.

This occasion promises to be one of the most interesting and important since the organization of the Association.

All persons interested in popular education and especially those directly engaged in teaching, must be fully convinced that much labor has been squandered in the efforts put forth to impart knowledge under the present system of common schools.

Since our present school law makes no definite provision for uniformity of text books, our schools are flooded with authors, and the unfortunate teacher is expected to hear each pupil in his own text book, thereby losing the great benefits arising from thorough classification.

To improve our system, we propose to make the subject of "Uniformity of Text Books a special order of business at our next session.

The committee have concluded to devote the afternoon and evening of the first day of the session to this discussion, and longer time, if necessary.

The delegates elected from the various districts are urgently requested to be present at that time, that their views may be known, and the wishes of their respective districts presented.

A more favorable time for the thorough investigation of this subject will not soon occur, and we hope that not only teachers and delegates will be present, but every one interested in the prosperity of our common schools.

After the consideration of text books is disposed of, the Association will discuss the various divisions of Arithmetic. Heretofore, our mode of discussion has not resulted as favorably as could be desired, the time allowed to any one branch having been altogether inadequate to a thorough investigation.

It is now intended to give Arithmetic an exhaustive discussion, going into the investigation of every principle connected with the theory of numbers.

To this end, we shall invite various persons to assume the position of teachers, conducting the Institute in all respects as a class while discussing the different divisions of arithmetic, and we desire that every one will give the subject a careful review, and be prepared to add his mite to the general fund, so that no one may go away with a doubt as to any principle pertaining to arithmetical calculations.

The interesting topic of Reading will also be considered.

The various exercises will be interspersed with Essays, Declamations, &c., &c. It has been suggested by many that each teacher volunteer some exercise as an Essay, Oration or Recitation. We heartily endorse the suggestion, and shall be pleased to receive assurances from any one that such exercises will be forthcoming.

We are authorized to say that ample provision will be made by the citizens of Belpasi and vicinity, for the entertainment of teachers and friends of the cause.

THE PERILS OF NEWSPAPER PUFFING.—Among the vices connected with newspaper business, is the necessity of either puffing or refusing to puff somebody—a necessity which is presented to the editor at almost every issue of his paper. If he refuse to puff, the applicant (perhaps, a good customer,) goes off in a huff thinking the editor a stingy, unaccommodating bear. If he consent to puff, he is continually liable to the danger of praising something of which he knows nothing, and of making himself the laughing stock of others who know the worthlessness of the thing puffed. Besides this, it is almost impossible to puff anything or anybody without exciting the jealousies and enmities of others in the same line of business with the puffee. Local editors, therefore, are always steering through narrow straits, with danger ahead, danger on the right, danger on the left and danger in the rear. He has to keep his eyes skinned or in some unguarded moment he is hopelessly stranded. We have heard a story of the editor of the Unionist which illustrates the danger of puffing a thing on the strength alone of the puffee's representations. Some time ago, no matter how long, Doctor D ....., no matter of what school, called upon Mac. to get a puff. Finding Mac in his office, the Doctor inquired, "Are you the editor?" Receiving an affirmative answer, the Doctor proceeded, "Well, I've got an item for you; a first rate item. I have just performed a splendid operation—cut a man's leg off—wonderful operation—man doing first rate—cut off his leg close up—getting along first-rate—will be well in a few days—splendid operation—first rate item for your paper." Suddenly as he came, the Dr. went again. Mac thought to himself, "Well that is a pretty fair item; man's leg cut off close up, and going to get well in a few days!" Mac made an item—a glowing one; "splendid operation—skillful surgeon—man doing well, etc. etc." Next morning, as his paper was about to go to press, Doctor made up, containing the "first rate item," in rushed Doctor D ....., with "Mr Editor! Mr Fulton! guess you'd better not say anything about that man—leg cut off, you know—the man's dead as h—l!" Of course, Mac could do nothing but unlock his forme and take out the deceased puff. Mac never puffs anything now, without the most irrefragable proof.

AN OUTSIDER'S VIEWS OF PORTLAND.—The Dalles correspondent of the Walla Walla Statesman, who has recently paid a visit to Portland, writes as follow: In conversation with leading merchants of Portland, I learn that trade is brisk with the Willamette valley. Considerable attention is being devoted to the interests of that long neglected country, and a project is set on foot to connect Portland with the Willamette ovalley by means of a railroad. This measure partially accounts for the neglect Idaho is experiencing the present year, at the hands of Portland capitalists. In this the Portlanders act wisely. The trade with Idaho is fluctuating and uncertain, and payments very slow. Add to this the unavoidable opposition of the Californians to the Columbia river route, and you will arrive at the conclusion that the merchants and capitalists of Portland will find it greatly to their benefit to improve their own natural advantages. So far but little business has been transacted with eastern Oregon and Idaho, and leading business houses assure me that the trade has fallen off over fifty per cent. As a general rule the merchants keep but small stocks of goods on hand, preferring to do a light business, as they are assuredly laying a decline in staples. Quite a number of business men of Portland desired they could do more. I find they are exercising greater caution in selling goods on time than heretofore. In former days almost any one could go to Portland or the Dalles, purchase a stock of goods, hang out a sign, do business in town or county, and make payments at pleasure, or run off to Salt Lake, never to be heard from again. An experience of five years has necessarily cured the commercial community of the emporium of this weakness, and at this time upstanding merchants, once considered reliable, are now refused credit. So well have the Portland merchants succeeded in deriving information as to the financial standing of business houses, that they can tell as far as Salt Lake which firm is good or bad, and shape their dealings accordingly. This partly accounts for the falling off in trade, but, as I have above shown, the Portland merchants are gainers.

PASSENGERS FOR SAN FRANCISCO.—The steamship Continental, Wm. Metzger, commander, sailed for San Francisco, at 7 o'clock P. M. yesterday, taking the following list of passengers: Col. G. H. Mendell and wife, U. S. A., Maj. Elliott, wife and child, U. S. A., S. W. Levy, Mrs. Koehland, Samuel Scott and wife, D. H. McAmrich, A. Vermason, M. Arrison, J. G. Ewing, G. J. Sornsifini, Mrs. Mary A. Glinton, A. Conlin, L. Brownson, wife and two children, A. H. Schyf and wife, Miss Lizzie Schyff, Miss Sarah Schyff, Mrs. R. Watt, Martin E Alexander and servant, E. Brown, E Urbu, D. D. Williams, Mrs. W. T. Ballow, George Gundlach, J. Fox, C. E. Taylor, M. Moskowitz, C. Fleischner, J. T. Bonstell, Henry Solsen, H. M. C. Smith, Mrs. Remington, Miss Maggie Schyff, Miss May Schyff, Mrs. E. Beauford and boy, Geo. Wapple, Miss Lizzie Savage, H. A. Seigfried, Wells, Fargo & Co's Manager and 25 others.

SOMETHING TO TALK ABOUT.—The city had something to talk about yesterday: the late election by the City Council. Groups of laughing men and groups of frowning men were gathered here and there, on the street corners, in the hotels, on the wharves, and everywhere else; and every where the groups were animatedly discussing the election. "The election," "Rinnelella," "Hallock," etc., were in the mouths of everybody. Most whom you would, and "the election" and "the council" were the first subjects broached. "How do's" were dropped and all the election could be gone over again. Farewells were forgotten in a few last words about the election. People tarried on the election, drank toddies with "election" in them and, finally, went to bed in ballot boxes and covered themselves with ballots. If anybody dreamed a dream, it is a dead sure thing that the "baseless fabric" was reared upon the election.

THE BOYS ABOUT THE WHARVES.—When we have been about the wharves and have seen from half a dozen to two or three dozen small boys playing about the water, in skiffs, floating on planks, logs and more chunks of wood, we have often wondered that there are no more cases of drowning reported. It is impossible to understand why parents will permit small children to play for hours and hours, day after day, where they run such risks of losing their lives. Yesterday while walking along one of the lower wharves, we saw a quite small boy precipitated backward into the river from a skiff. He caught hold of the skiff, by the veriest good fortune, as he rose, and pulled himself up into the boat. At another time he might not be so fortunate, and then some careless parent might be called to mourn the loss of a child.

THE PORTLAND ACADEMY AND FEMALE SEMINARY.—This school will close the present term to-day. The week has been occupied, mostly with the examination of the classes. The closing exercises this evening, will consist of music, orations, declamations, recitations, colloquies, etc. The number of students enrolled during the term is one hundred and twelve. The school is now to have a vacation till the first Monday in September next, when the fall term will begin. The success of the Academy under the administration of Prof. Gatch has been most flattering, both to its immediate directors and its friends. The term just closing, occurring in mid-summer, shows a shorter roll of students than the average.

FREIGHT FOR SAN FRANCISCO.—The Continental took away yesterday evening the following list of freight: 3,230 sks. Flour, 87 barrels Salmon, 1½ half do., 3 cans do., 82 cases of Bacon, 10 cases mdse., 22 bales mdse., 116 half bbls. dried Apples, 2 cases Furs, 2 bales Furs, 131 bales Wool, 6 casks Ale, 17 empty Ale pkls, 14 bbls. Currants, 10 cases Muskets, 10 cases ammunition, 3 half bbls. Eggs, 62 boxes Eggs, 304 sks. Middlings, 36 dry Hides, 34 green Hides, 3 bales of sheep skins, 1 Circular Saw, 18 lbs Shafting, 2 Boiler Heads, 7 kegs Rivets, 90 Boiler Heads, 8 cops. Fuse.

A SENSATION REPORT.—A report, in some way, became current on the streets, yesterday, that W. R. Hill, familiarly known in this city as "Buckskin Bill," had been shot and killed in a row at Salem on Wednesday. We could not trace the report to any reliable source, and in the afternoon, Mr. Guild, the operator of the telegraph, inquired of the operator at Salem, who returned for an answer that he had heard nothing of it. If anything of the kind happened, it was probably elsewhere than Salem. The greater probability is that the report was altogether without foundation.

ACCIDENT.—An accident that came near being serious, occurred to Professor Lyman, last evening. He was driving rather rapidly in a buggy, when he turned the corner of Front and Yamhill streets without checking the speed of his horse much. Nicholson being wet, the horse's feet flew from under him and he came down heavily, breaking one shaft of the buggy and doing other damage. No injury was done to either the Professor or his wife and child, who were in the buggy with him, but both the latter were much frightened.

STEAMER ARRANGEMENTS.—Hereafter, until further notice, the P. T. Co.'s steamer Senator will leave her wharf at 5 o'clock A. M. on Mondays and Thursdays. On all other days, the hour of starting will be 7 o'clock as heretofore. On Mondays and Thursdays, the Senator connects at Oregon City with the boats for Salem. The low stage of water hinders the boats somewhat in getting up, and the passage of hour for the Senator is made to give them two hours more time between the basin and Salem.

A HEAVY CASTING.—Mr. David Monnastes, one of the pioneer foundrymen of this city, a day or two since, cast two of the mortars for an eight-stamp quartz mill, for the Owyhee country, which weighs 2,000 pounds—cast in one piece. It is peculiar in shape, and inexperienced patrons would naturally wonder how such a shape with so much weight, could be cast in one mould. It could not be done except by the most skillful and careful management.

CIRCUIT COURT—SHATTUCK, JUDGE.—The following are the proceedings in the Circuit Court, yesterday, July 25th:

N. Schuyler vs. Chas S Fechheimer et al, judgment on verdict of jury, for plaintiff in the sum of $300; motion for new trial overruled.

John A. Carr vs. John Monroe; jury empannelled; all the day occupied in the examination of witnesses.

MASON GAME.—The first nine of the Clackamas Base Ball Club, will go over to Vancouver this morning on the Senator to play the second game in the match pending between the two clubs. The challege was given by the Clackamas club. The preliminaries were arranged by telegraph, on Wednesday.

WILLAMETTE FREIGHTS.—Arrived per steamer Senator from Oregon City, Thursday, July 25th: 10 boxes eggs, 34 gunnies bacon, 1,160 qr sks flour, 20 boxes fruit, 4 cases woolen goods, 4 bales do, 6 half bbls produce, 45 boxes do., 1 case mdse, 1 package saddles, 96 doors, 1 bale furs.

PASSENGERS.—We met, yesterday, several old acquaintances, just down from Idaho, among whom were N. T. Clitor, formerly of Salem, and Mr. Henderson, of Eugene City. They report nothing in the way of news.

FOR TILLAMOOK.—It was the intention last evening of Capt. Quick, of the schooner Champion, to sail to-day for Tillamook. The Champion will take about thirty tons of merchandise a general assortment.

TRIP TO VANCOUVER.—The steamer Senator will leave the P. T. Co.'s wharf to-day at about half past ten o'clock for Vancouver, carrying the Clackamas Club and visitors. She will start on the return trip at about four o'clock P. M. Tickets for the round trip, one dollar and a half.

PORTLAND LIBRARY.—The following new books have just been added to the Portland Library: Life of Horace Mann, In Bonds, a novel by Laura Preston; The Great States, Catlin's Notes in Europe.

THE FIDELITAN.—A telegram from Victoria announces the sailing of the Fidelitan from that port for Portland, at 9 o'clock yesterday morning.

TREASURE SHIPMENT.—Wells, Fargo & Co., shipped yesterday, per steamship Continental, for San Francisco, $120,000 in treasure.

SIMPLE MEDICINES are very well for simple complaints, but that's the stuff for only $20 a unit at Barman Bros., on corner Front and Morrison streets, formerly City of Paris Store, Portland.

"I have found Western landlords so sociable as to insist in putting another man in the same bed with you to keep in countenance. A friend of mine in Kansas told me that he once asked for a room in a Missouri hotel, and the landlord replied, "Yes; but a train arrives after midnight, and there may be another passenger to sleep in your bed." "Very well, replied my friend, resignedly. Shortly after, a tall, gaunt, grim bush-whacker, who in a few moments got into bed with his trowsers on. "Stranger," exclaimed the unprepossessing personage to the first occupant, "did you hear about the murder in Bayou?" "Yes," was the reply. "Well, I'm the man that did the killing."

STATE TEACHERS' INSTITUTE.—The Oregon State Teachers' Institute and Educational Association will hold its annual session in Portland, commencing on Tuesday, July 30th. The teachers and all others interested in the cause of education, are cordially invited to be present and participate in the exercises. Those wishing to find homes during their stay of the Institute will please report themselves to the undersigned at the corner of Taylor and Park streets. O. S. FRAMBES, Rec. Sec'y.

PERFECTLY ENRAPTURING.—Such were our feelings as we stepped into the Music and Art Gallery of W. T. SHANAHAN, on First street, a few days since, and listened to the delightful tones and harmony which came from one of Mason & Hamlin's Cabinet Organs. From the soft breathing flute tones to the thundering bass of the pipe organ, all was equally free and sweet. And why is it other makers cannot produce instruments like these? Mason & Hamlin were the first to introduce the Cabinet Organ, and have gained such world-wide notoriety that it requires the work of two large factories to supply the demand for these valuable instruments.

A SPLENDID INSTRUMENT.—We saw, yesterday, at J. L. Parrish & Co's something new in the way of an organ—a French instrument called the Organ Harmonium—invented by Alphonse Rodolphe. It is a very considerable modification of the organ as we have them from the American manufactories. It is provided with sixteen stops, each of which exercises a distinct and peculiar effect upon the tone. The base stops are the Forte, Jeu Doux, (soft, sweet) Basson, Clarion, Bourdon, English Horn; the treble stops are Expression, Tremolo, Scotch Bagpipe, Flute, Clarionette, Fife, Hautbois, Voix Celeste, Diapason, and Knee or Full Expression. The effect of these stops in changing the tone is most surprising. For instance, from the flute to Voix Celeste with Full Expression, the tone changes from what sounds precisely like a soft flute, to the full grand harmony which we would expect from an Angel choir—what the name imports. A Key-Board is movable and can be adjusted to any key, to any instrument, or to the voice of any singer. Other changes are no less surprising. The instruments are of the most perfect workmanship and of the highest finish; have taken the first medals at all the great European Expositions. The prices range from $175, to $900. Persons in want of an instrument should call and see them, for it is impossible to get a correct idea of them, except from personal inspection. J. L. Parrish & Co, are sole agents for the Pacific coast.

A LARGE ASSORTMENT OF THE MOST APproved patterns of Cooking and Heating, consisting of—

Marrying a Convict.

I had served for twenty five years on board an East Indiaman, and for the last ten years had commanded the Belle, one of the finest crafts that ever floated. I was an old sea dog and had dwelt so long on salt water that I felt almost a hatred for the land. On the 20th of October, 1824, I received orders to put myself in readiness to sail for Cayenne. I was to transport seventy-five soldiers and a convict. I had orders to treat this individual well, and the letter I received from the Directory enclosed another, with a large red seal, which I was not to open until between 27° and 28° west longitude—that is, just before we were about to cross the line.

The letter was a long packet, so well closed on every side that it was impossible to catch the slightest glimpse of its contents. I am naturally superstitious, but there was something in the look of the letter that I did not altogether like, though I could never give no reason why. However, I carried it into the cabin and stuck it under the glass of a little old English clock, which was fastened above my head. I was busy fixing the letter under the clock, when who should come into my cabin but the convict and his wife! This was the first time I had seen either of them, and I may say that a more prepossessing couple I never before met. The woman was scarcely more than fifteen, and as handsome as a picture, while the husband was a very intelligent, magnificently formed man, on whose features nature had never written "villain."

His crime, to be plain, was the misfortune of being a hundred years ahead of his age. He and some others had attempted something which our government called treason, and which it punished with death. It therefore occasioned me considerable wonder that he should be placed under my charge. But of this afterward.

He had, as I said, his wife hanging on his arm. She was as merry as a bird, she looked like a turtle dove, cooing and nestling beneath his great wing.

Before a month had passed over our heads, I looked upon them as my own children. Every morning I used to call them into my cabin. The young fellow would sit writing at my table, that is to say, at my chest, which was also my bed. He would often help me at reckoning, and he soon learned to do better than I could. I was amazed at his ability. His young wife would sit upon one of the round stools in my cabin, working at her needle.

One day we were all three sitting this way, when I said:

"Do you know, my young ones, as it seems to me, we make a very pretty family picture? Mind, I don't mean to ask questions, but maybe you have not much money to spare, and you are, both of you, as I think, too handsome to dig in the burning sun of Cayenne, like many a poor wretch before you. It's a bad country—a bad country, take my word for it. I, who have roughed it through tempest, wind and sunshine, till I've the skin of a rhinoceros, might get along there; but you, I'm afraid for you. So, if you would chance to have a bit of foolish friendship for your poor old captain, I'll tell you what I'll do. I'll get rid of this old brig, she's not much better than an old tub, after all; so I'll settle myself down there with you, if you like. You see I have not a living soul in the world to care for, or that cares for me. I want relations, I want a home, I want a family. I should like to make my home with you, my pretty little ones. What say you to that, eh?"

They said nothing at all, but sat looking, first at each other and then at me, as if they doubted whether they understood what I had said.

At last the little bird threw her arms around my neck and cried like a baby.

"But," said she, suddenly pausing, "you haven't looked at the letter with the massive red seal."

"Hang it!" I exclaimed, "it had slipped my mind entirely."

With a cold, dreadful sensation, I went to the sheet to see where we were. I found that we had several days remaining before we could reach the proper longitude for opening the letter.

Well, there we stood, all three of us, looking up at the letter as if it could have spoken to us. As it happened, the sun was shining full upon the face of the clock-case, and fell upon the great staring red seal of the letter. I could not help fancying it looked something like a big monster, grinning from the middle of the fire; it looked horrid.

"I could not one fancy," said I, to make them laugh, "its great big eyes were staring out of its head!"

"Ah, my love," said the wife, "it looks like blood."

"Pooh, pooh!" said her husband, taking her arm under his, "it looks like a letter of invitation to a wedding. Come, come, leave the poor letter alone, if it troubles you so. Let's go to our room and prepare for bed."

And they went off. They went up on deck and left me with that beast of a letter. I remember that I kept looking at it as I smoked my pipe, it seemed to fix its great red eye upon mine, fascinating like the eyes of a serpent. It was red, wide, raw, staring like the maw of a fierce wolf. I took my great coat and hung it over both clock and letter and went upon deck to finish my pipe.

We were now in the vicinity of Cape de Verde Islands the Belle was running before a fair wind, at the rate of ten knots an hour. It was a splendid tropical night—the stars large and shining, the moon rising above the horizon, as large as a sun of silver, the line of ocean parting it, and a long stream of bars, shimmering light falling upon the waves, which, as they broke, sparkled like jewels. I sat upon the deck smoking my pipe and looking at them.

All was still, except the footfall of the officer of the watch as he paced the deck, gazing, as I was upon the shadow of the vessel stealing over the silent waters.

I love silence and order; I hate noise and confusion. The lights should all have been extinguished by this time; but when I looked upon the deck I thought I saw a little red hue of light beneath my feet. At another time and place this would have made me angry; but knowing the light came from the cabin of my little deportes, I determined to see what they were about.

I had only to look down—I could see into the cabin from the sky-light.

The young girl was upon her knees; she was saying her prayers. A lamp swinging from the ceiling lighted her room. She had on a long white night dress, and her fair golden hair floated over her shoulders, and almost touched two little bare feet which were peeping from under her white dress, so pretty. I turned away—but, pshaw! said I, I am an old sailor. What matters it? So I stayed.

The husband was sitting upon a little trunk, his head resting upon his hands, looking at her as she prayed. She raised her face to heaven, and I then saw her eyes were filled with tears. She looked like a Magdalene. As she rose, he said:

"Ah, my sweet Laurette, as we approach America, I cannot help being anxious—I do not know why—but I feel that this voyage has been the happiest part of our lives."

"So it seems to me," she answered. "I only wish it could last forever."

Suddenly clasping his hands in a transport of love and affection, he said:

"And yet my little angel, I see you cry when you say your prayers, and that I cannot stand, for I know what causes it, and then I fear you must repent what you have done."

"Repent!" she said, in a sad, rebuking tone. "Repent of having come with you. Do you think, because I have been yours only such a very short time, that I should not love you? Was I not your wife? How can you be sorry that I should be with you, to live with you if you live, and to die with you if you are to die?"

The young man began to sigh, striking the floor impatiently with his feet, while he kissed repeatedly the little hand and arm which she was holding out.

"Ah, Laurette, when I think that if our marriage had only been delayed five days, that then I should have been arrested and and transported alone, I cannot forgive myself.

At this time the little one stretched out her round white arms, clasped his head, pressed his forehead, his hair, his eyes, smiling like a cherub, and murmuring all sorts of woman's fond things. I was quite affected, and considered it one of the prettiest scenes I had ever witnessed.

"And besides we are so very rich, to!" said she bursting out laughing. "Look at my purse, one gold louis d'or—all my worldly wealth."

He began to laugh, too.

"Yes, dear, I have spent my last half crown. I gave it to the fellow that carried our trunks on board."

"Ah, poor!" cried she, "what matters it? Nobody so merry as those who have nothing at all, besides I have my two diamond rings that my mother gave me; they are good for something the world over: we can sell them when you like, and besides I am sure the captain meant kindly by us, and I suspect he knows very well what is in the letter. It's a recommendation to the Governor of Cayenne."

"Perhaps so, who knows?"

"To be sure it is," continued the charming little wife. "You are so good I am sure the government has banished you only for a short time—I know they can certainly have no feeling against you."

It was high time that the light should be put out, and I now rapped on the deck and called them to do so.

They instantly obeyed, and I heard them laughing and chattering away like two innocent schoolfellows.

One morning when I awoke, I was surprised not to find the slightest motion of the vessel. Hurrying on deck, I found we were becalmed Latitude, one degree north, longitude, between 27 and 28 degrees west.

I waited until night, when I descended into the cabin, and opened the letter with a dull, awful feeling. I held my breath while I broke the big red seal, and read

"Captain Fontainbleau.—The convict, Antoine Hindeclear, stands convicted of high treason against the Republic. The Directory order that he be shot in mid ocean, and you are hereby instructed to see that these orders are carried into effect."

I read the letter backward and forward. I went on deck. There they were who looking up on the ocean, and he gazing at her with an expression of unutterable fondness. Catching his eye, I signed for him to come into the cabin, and bidding her good bye, he came down, his face all smiles.

I was bathed in a cold sweat. I felt as if deadly sick; I handed him the letter, and he read it together with the death warrant, which was drawn up in due form, and attached. I gathered voice as he finished.

He colored slightly and bowed.

"I ask nothing, captain," he said in the same gentle voice that always characterised his speech; "no man can be expected to swerve from his duty. I only wish to speak a few words to Lauretta, and to entreat you to take care of her, if she should survive—but I hardly think she will."

"All that is fair, my good fellow," said I. "If you request it, I will carry her back to France to her family. I will never leave her until she wishes to be rid of me, but I do not think she will survive it."

He took my hand and pressed it.

"Most kind captain, I see you suffer more in this business than I do—but there is no help for it. I trust you will preserve what little property of mine is left, for her sake, and you will take care she gets what her poor old mother may leave her. I put her life, her honor, in your hands. She is" (and how fondly low his voice became) "a delicate little creature—her chest is often affected, she must keep it warm, and if she could keep the two diamond rings her mother gave her, I should be glad, but of course, if money is needed, they must go. My poor Laurette—how pretty she looks!"

It was getting too much for me, and I began to to knit my brow.

"One word is as good as a thousand," said I. "We two understand each other. Go to her."

I squeezed his hand, he looked wistfully at me, and I added: "Stay a moment, let me give you a word of advice. Don't say a word to her; be easy, that is my business. It shall be managed in the best manner."

"Ah," said he, "I did not understand, yes, much better. Besides, this leave taking, this leave-taking!"

"Yes," said I, "don't behave like a child—much better. No leave taking, if you can help it, or you are lost."

I kept my seat. I saw them walking arm in arm upon the deck for about half an hour.

I called the mate to me, and when he had read the letter, I said:

"Garley, this is bad business—bad business. I put it in your hands. I obey the orders but remain in the cabin till it is over."

"How do you wish the thing done?" he asked in a nonchalant manner.

"Take him out in a boat—out of sight, do it as quick as possible, don't say anything of this till the time comes."

Garley sat five minutes looking at me without saying a word. He was a strange fellow. I didn't know what to make of him. He then went out of the cabin without saying a word.

Night came at last. "Man a boat, go a quarter of a mile—be quick."

To obey a slip of paper! for it was but a slip of paper after all. Something in the very air must have urged me on. I saw the young man kneel down before his Lauretta, kiss her knees, her feet, her gown! I cried out like a madman.

"Part them! part them this instant! Part them—curse the Republic—curse the Directory—the Directors! I quit the service—curse the lawyers! You may tell them if you will."

She was dragged into her berth, and the boat rowed away in the darkness.

Some time after a dull volley came over the sea to the vessel. It was all over.

Fool, madman—how I paced the deck and cursed myself. All night long I paced back and forth, and all night long I heard the moaning of the poor stricken bird.

Often I halted, and was tempted to throw myself into the sea, and so end this horrid torture of brain and heart.

Days passed, I saw nothing of Laurette. I would not see her. She avoided me, and I was glad of it. I could not bear the sight of that woe stricken face.

The caste, Garley; how I hated him. He was as cool and unconcerned as though he had no remembrance of shooting the poor wretch.

At Cayenne I resigned my ship. Going to the city, I made all my arrangements, and took the steamer for New York. I placed ample funds in the hands of a trusty friend, and told him to send Laurette to me at the end of six months. I could not see her until her grief had lost its edge.

Weary, sick and careless of my life, I wandered off into New York State, and finally bought a little place, where I hoped I should lay down and die.

I sent for Laurette. Poor bird I must see her. I could wait no longer.

One summer night I sat in the porch of my house, smoking my pipe and gazing down the road. Soon the rumble of wheels were heard, and the stage halted.

The next moment a pair of soft arms was round my neck, and the head of my sobbing Laurette was on my bosom.

"Oh, you dear captain——"

"Heavens! who is that behind you?"

There stood the manly form of Antoine Hindeclear, the convict.

"What does this mean?" I demanded, hardly knowing whether I was dreaming or not.

"Are you glad to see me?"

"Thank God! thank God!" was all I could ejaculate.

I understood it all. The mate, Garley, had read my heart better than I did myself. After leaving the brig in the boat, he arranged the whole affair. The volley was fired, but no bullet touched Antoine Hindeclear. He was smuggled into his berth again, and took care to avoid my sight. The whole crew were in the plot, and thank God, I was duped.

I sent Garley a thousand dollars as a reward.

I am now an old man, but I am happy. My children and my grandchildren (I call them nothing else) seem to think old Captain Fontainblean is not such a wretch after all.

The grave of Calhoun is in a dilapidated condition, the slab of marble over his remains bearing the simple name "Calhoun," with no other word or sign.
